

Local Flip That House Goes Faux for Charity

Lake Elsinore, CA - In the middle of filming Flip That House (The Learning Channel's most-watched TV show), Lake Elsinore house flipper Brian Fisher suddenly passed away. Fisher's family felt overwhelmed by work left unfinished and the show struggled. With the help of author Adrienne van Dooren, the show takes a new direction.

The author of The House that Faux Built, van Dooren reached out to her volunteer artists who helped raise $45,000 so far towards a Habitat for Humanity house to be built in New Orleans. The generous contribution of the artists will give new life to the Fisher Family house featured on Flip That House. The artist uplift for the Fisher's will be the subject of a new book to benefit Habitat for Humanity, Flip That House with FAUX.

Local home improvement companies are invited to participate in the TV show and the book. Sponsors like Murrieta's Super Floor Store and Lake Elsinore's Nilsson Stone & Tile have already been filmed installing the flooring and countertops. The TV crew and the Fishers spent a day filming at Habitat for Humanity's home improvement warehouse in Corona purchasing supplies for the home remodel.

Artists from FauxMasters in Yorba Linda begin their artwork next month. Landscape design, inspired by www.myVisionScape.com, includes a pool makeover and outdoor kitchen.

In a strange twist, Jeanette Fisher, already an author of over ten real estate books, had already arranged for the show to benefit Habitat for Humanity. She met van Dooren at an author's conference in Los Angeles this month. Van Dooren's Habitat for Humanity project house is in Alexandria, Virginia.
